Submitted by: Danielle Bravo | Hualapai Planning Department and Hualapai Police Department

National Police Week Highlights: May 14 - May 20

- ◆ Tip-A-Cop Fundraiser kicked off the events on Monday, May 15, in which law enforcement officers and department personnel volunteer their time as "Celebrity Waiters" to collect tips at a restaurant, the local Diamond Creek Restaurant, in support of the Hualapai Head Start. All donated tips received assisted with expenses towards the end of the year Disneyland trip for the students. With this event, the Hualapai Police Department proudly announced and presented the Hualapai Head Start staff during the Flag Raising Ceremony that they raised $511 with your support.

8th Grade Promotion:

We had nineteen eighth grade students promoted to the ninth grade and walked the stage of Music Mountain High School on Monday, May 22nd. The gymnasium was filled with family, friends, staff and the community to support them. We are proud of their accomplishments and look forward to the upcoming school year.

12th Grade / Senior Graduation:

Ten Blue Diplomas were earned by our graduates this year. Through their hard work and commitment to finishing, this part of their journey has concluded and they now embark on their next chapter of their lives. The gymnasium was packed on Monday evening, May 22nd with their family, friends, staff and community members. We were honored to have Chairwoman Parker address the graduates, along with Ms. Bonita Imus and Jorigene Paya provided the opening and closing traditional Hualapai prayers. Many hands went into putting all of this together, including our staff, and parent volunteers to make this a very special night to remember.

We would like to say a special shout out to:

- KWLP "the Peach" Radio Station for providing sound system and great music;
- Grand Canyon Resort Corporation for filming both events and taking photos of the entire ceremony, printing copies on site for the students;
- "Celebration Recovery" - for their generous donation of gift cards to the graduates;
- Ron Quasula and Family for providing traditional bird singing during the ceremony;
- Hualapai Tribe / Public works for providing chairs/ tables / assistance with the set-up / break down of the room; and most importantly,
- The Hualapai community for supporting the students and staff of the promotees, the graduates, and all of the students of Peach Springs Unified School District.

Inspirational & Encouragement Corner

Romans 8:5-6 says...

Those who live according to the flesh have their minds set on what the flesh desires; but those who live in accordance with the Spirit have their minds set on what the Spirit desires. The mind governed by the flesh is death, but the mind governed by the Spirit is life and peace! Amen!

Life is overwhelming and God has not intended for you to allow everything into your life.

Day was separated from night for a reason, just as darkness was separated from light.

Without boundaries, the universe could not remain in motion. There needs to be boundaries in your life, to protect your heart... above all things. Its out of your heart that all else in your life flows, so do not allow anything that is not true, just pure, lovely or worthy of praise to be part of your thoughts or your life.

There is no room for what is unholy to be a part of the holiness in you. I AM, in you to fill you with truth, to assure you of the path you are to take and the boundaries you need to make.

There will be those who try to take advantage of your kindness, trample on your love and steal your peace from simple pleasure, don't allow it.

YOU have a choice Jesus has provided the way, if you will trust in God and not your own understanding, seeking Him in every area of your life.

I will be the one to make your path straight.

Boundaries keep you on the path, they keep you from moving to the right or left.

I am here to help you,
to keep you from stumbling! Amen!

Never Goodbye

Never Goodbye

These are hard times, bad news, rain clouds, in loving memories tattooed, pictures on my walls and memories of y'all work like sunbeams to drive away the gloom. If you ask me God took you too soon, lonely now, missing all of you, was it fate or a mistake? I sit and contemplate, why did you have to fly away to Heaven's gates? I'd give my whole world to have you here for half a day, I hold you in my heart, that warm and special place, and you can never be replaced. God must have needed angels up there in that starry place, to be another guardian against the struggles that we face. I hope your halo isn't heavy and there's a smile on your face, after God has wiped your tears away and with joy they've been replaced.

My heart will be the canvas, your memory painted perfect in my mind, and maybe in my dreams, laughing you will visit me in time. I know its not goodbye forever, one day my time will come, to fly into the mystery above, returning to the place of peace where it had all begun, and there we will laugh, and dance, and sing into eternity, love, peace, family and friends, forever my companions to never leave again.

Not the Same Without Yall

Not the same without y'all

Leaving these bars and razor wire fences will feel hella different coming home, now it aint the same, with my brother Nate and my sister Joyce and Auntie Donna not there. They rest in perfect peace, a headstone now with their names, the world feels a little emptier without y'all's cheerful company. I'll raise my drink and toast to you in loving memory, your laughter, smiles, and all those crazy times, even hours off in Wally World about to lose my mind, ever will be missed, and echo on my thoughts, and I pray you're held in eternal bliss as you're off into the great beyond.

The Grieving Process • Information

Submitted by: Marcus Querta

The Grieving Process

Grief: The natural emotional response resulting from a significant loss—especially the death of a loved one.

Everyone deals with grief differently. People cry, laugh, busy themselves with work, throw up, or even feel numb. Some recover quickly, while others take their time. Grief is a natural healing process, and there's no "right" way to do it.

For some people, grief can become too painful. It can grow into something totally different, like depression or anxiety. Other times, grief might last far too long, and take over a person's life for years on end. This is called complicated grief.

"Normal" grief varies greatly between cultures, people, and situations.

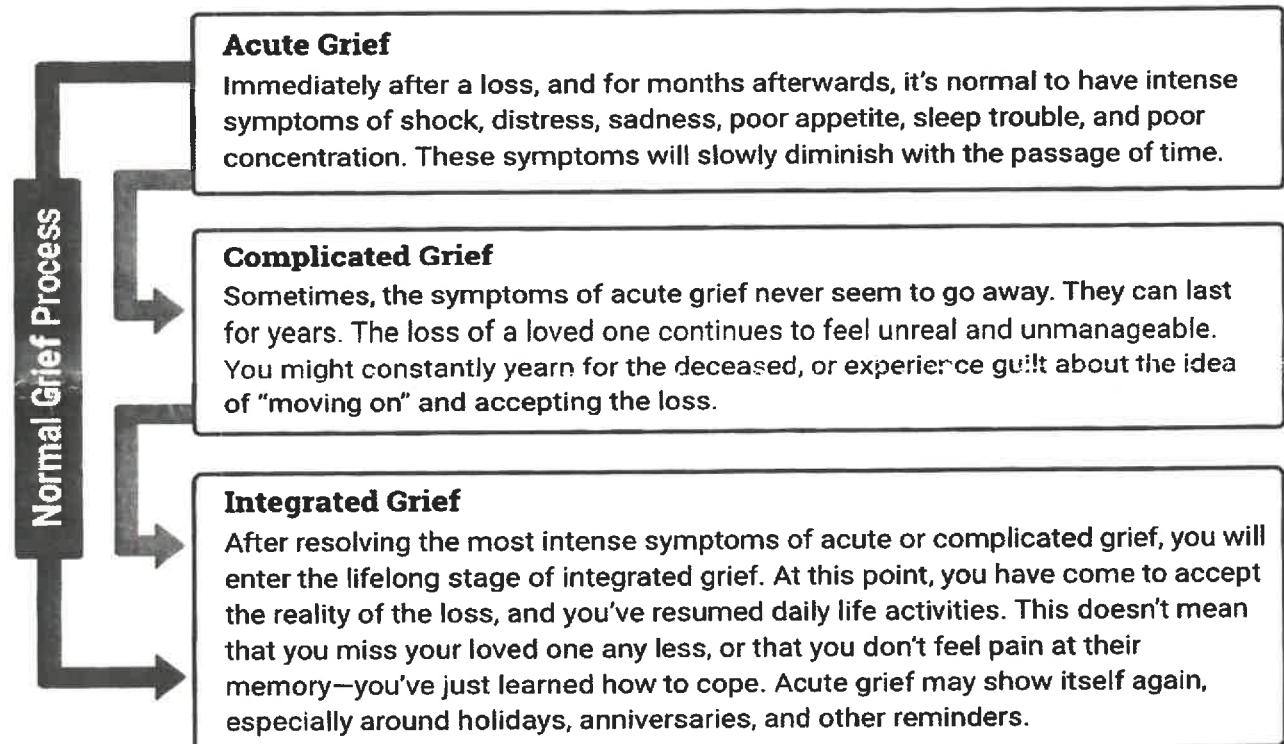

Grief is a natural process, and does not always require treatment.

About 10% of people develop complicated grief after a loss.

Complicated grief can be treated with psychotherapy.

Tasks of Mourning

After a death, survivors are left to face the pain of grief, and a new world without their loved one. Mourning is the process of adapting to loss through the completion of four tasks.

Keep in mind that adapting doesn't mean forgetting—it means finding a way to cherish the memories of a loved one, while continuing to move forward in life. It means adjusting to a world without the deceased, while holding a place for them in your heart.

Task 1: Accept the reality of the loss.

After a death, it's common that the reality of the situation is minimized or denied. To complete this task, the reality of the loss must be fully accepted, both intellectually and emotionally.

Task 2: Process the pain of grief.

Grief involves painful emotions such as sadness, anger, and guilt. It can be tempting to avoid these feelings, burying them rather than facing them. However, working through grief means confronting, naming, and making sense of these emotions.

Task 3: Adjust to a world without the deceased.

The death of a loved one will usually bring about a number of life changes. These can range from minor changes in daily routines, to the adoption of an entirely new worldview. The third task is about navigating these changes and adjusting to the world without the loved one.

Internal adjustments are changes to one's identity. Survivors may have to answer the question, "Who am I now?" They may also experience changes to self-esteem.

External adjustments include taking on new roles and developing new skills. Survivors may have to take on the tasks that were handled by their loved one, such as cooking and childcare.

Spiritual adjustments are changes to beliefs, values, and assumptions about the world. For example, a belief that "the world is fair" might change after a loss. The survivor may choose to reaffirm, modify, or replace their previous worldview.

Task 4: Find a way to remember the deceased while moving forward in life.

Moving on doesn't mean forgetting. It means finding a place for the deceased in one's thoughts—a place that is important but still leaves room for others. Completing this task means finding a healthy balance between cherishing their memory and moving forward in life.

My Stages of Grief

Instructions: Describe how each of the stages of grief has affected you.

Denial: "This can't be happening."

Anger: "Why is this happening to me?"

---

Bargaining: "I will do anything to change this."

---

Depression: "What's the point of going on after this loss?"

---

Acceptance: "I know what happened, and I can't change it. Now I need to cope."

Processing Grief Through Writing Letters

Losing a person and grief is often the toughest thing one can go through in life. Things get left unsaid, emotions not shared, and no closure gained. We often think of grief when referring to losing someone due to death, but we can lose a person to distance, break-ups, and falling out of touch. When we feel grief over losing a person there are often many things we wish we could say or express but may not have the opportunity to do so through talking to the person. Writing a letter can help you process your grief through releasing some of your feelings and expressing emotions that may be lingering in your mind and preventing you from letting the person go.

Goodbye Letter:

Step 1: Taking Your Time

The first step in writing the Goodbye Letter is to not rush it. If it has only been a short time after you lost someone, give yourself the time you personally need to move through the stages of grief. The grieving process is not something that can be rushed through. Attempting to do so often leaves people with unresolved feelings. This letter writing process should be done at a pace that feels right to you. For some it will be fast and furious, and for others slow and come in fits or small starts. If you begin writing the letter and start feeling uncomfortable, then you may not be ready to write yet. If you find yourself getting frustrated with the process, it is okay. Grieving takes different amounts of time for people so the amount of time you take to grieve may be different than others around you. When you feel ready to do so, then approach the task of writing a Goodbye letter. Keep in mind, you may need to write several letters as your needs change with time.

Step 2: Writing the Letter

The next step is writing the actual letter. You may write as much or as little as you want. If you start feeling uncomfortable after writing a line or two then it is okay to stop. The process takes time, so select a day to write when you feel more comfortable. Write everything you wish you could express to that person...all the things you've been holding onto. Keep writing until you have gotten everything off your mind. For some people this process may take a couple weeks and for others it may take months. I may span three pages or twenty. Many people need to write the letter and put it aside, returning to it several days later to edit their thoughts. This letter is specifically for you. It is not a letter to send; rather, it is a letter you will eventually read out loud in Step 3.

If you are having difficulty starting, some lines that may help include:

- |                                    |                                      |
|------------------------------------|--------------------------------------|
| ≈ My best memory of you is...      | ≈ I never wanted...                  |
| ≈ Now that you are gone, I feel... | ≈ After _____ I felt...              |
| ≈ I'm happy to say goodbye to...   | ≈ Sometimes I think about...         |
| ≈ I really wish...                 | ≈ How could you...                   |
| ≈ I miss _____ the most because... | ≈ What I learned from you is...      |
| ≈ I wish I could have told you...  | ≈ When I think about _____ I feel... |
| ≈ You meant _____ to me....        | ≈ I hope.....                        |
| ≈ I'm so angry that you...         |                                      |

Step 3: Reading the Letter Aloud

The third step is to read the letter out loud. Make yourself comfortable and imagine the person to whom you are writing the letter is in front of you. Read the letter directly to them, with all the energy and emotion that you can. Continue to hold their image in our mind as you express everything in the letter. You may find you wish to add things as your read, even if you previously felt the letter was finished. Feel free to do so. Once you've expressed everything you want, or find yourself tired out, wish the person a final goodbye. Destroy the letter. As you destroy the letter, imagine all the emotions you have been feeling are being released, and your words are carried to the person.
